WILLKIE COMES OUT FOR MODIFIED AID BILL, URGES 5 TO 10 DESTROYERS MONTHLY FOR BRITAIN

Educator Reports Cut in State Aid Would Be Harmful

Local Taxation Will Have to Be Increased, Says Strayer, if Monies Not Provided

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11 (AP)—Curtailment of state aid to schools will lower the quality of education provided in many communities, an educator told one of two taxpayer conferences to day on the eve of a public hearing on the proposed $385,000,000 state budget.

Although separately sponsored, both meetings sought to form "economic programs" revising Governor Lehman's suggested 1941-42 appropriations.

The governor has recommended continuance of the two per cent reduction of educational state aid which the Republican legislative majority voted over his objections last year.

George D. Strayer, of Teachers College, Columbia University, told a taxpayer conference on quality and cost of education that "if this is done and the schools are maintained at their present level, additional funds must be provided by an increase in local taxation."

"In the cities, villages, central rural districts, union free districts, and common school districts in which the level of suport is now low," he added, "any diminution in state aid must result in many communities in a lowering of the quality of the educational opportunity provided."

Would Examine Books

The conference, sponsored by the New York state economic council, was urged by Archibald E. Stevenson, New York city attorney, to examine without delay the textbooks used by chilldren in local schools.

"One of the dangers that threaten this country," he said, "is the growing indifference toward those ideals and principles which have distinguished the American way of life from that of all other peoples."

Mark M. Jones, Akron, Ohio, businessman, told the council session a reconsideration of amounts spent on schools is required because education "for 70 years has been departing from its original purpose of preparing the individual for life under this distinctive American system."

Jones attributed the swing to "increasing emphasis on so-called intellectualism or over-specialization."

He urged "as a matter of principle alone it is now in order to reconsider the financial outlays on public education" but he recommended "no abrupt action or insufficiently considered measure be taken to that end."

While one meeting concentrated on education, several hundred delegates from other taxpayer, civic and farm organizations gathered in a nearby hotel to scan the entire budget for possible savings to offset increased federal taxes for defense.

Seeking to expand the $9,000,000 reduction of appropriations which the governor recommended, they will present whatever program is formulated at the budget hearing tomorrow.

Joint sponsors of the meeting are the Citizens Public Expenditure Survey, Inc., Albany, and the Taxpayers Federation, Inc., New York city. The scheduled round-table discussions on numerous budget items and several speeches, including an address by Allen Moore of the national defense advisory commission.

Three Die in Fire

Flames Sweep Bennington House; Grandfather, 2 Children Victims

Bennington, Vt., Feb. 11 (AP)—Two small children and a grandfather who doted on them died together last night when fire climbed through their home.

Leslie Becker, 55, the grandfather, living in a rear section, had an easy chance to escape.

But he made his way instead to the first-floor room where four-weeks-old Judith Lee Becker was sleeping. His charred body was found beside the burned crib.

Sheets of flame blocked repeated efforts of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Becker, to save the other child, Eleanor Ann, 18 months old, in an upstairs room, and forced them to clamber from a second floor window.

Firemen blamed a defective chimney.

Balkans Fear Offensive

Giant Aircraft of Type Used to Carry Parachute Troops Drum Eastward; Climax in Europe Anticipated by Experts in War Strategy

(By The Associated Press)

An official Turkish newspaper said today German troops were pouring steadily into Bulgaria with their officers declaring "our goal is the Bosporus and the Mediterranean," and simultaneously fleets of Nazi transport planes were reported flashing across Hungary headed for Rumania and Bulgaria.

In the heightening crisis, Turkish quarters in London said Turkey would be willing to help Bulgaria "if Bulgaria withstands Germany."

PLANES ARE SIGHTED

Fleets of German transport planes, identified as the type used to drop Nazi parachute troops in the 1940 blitzkrieg on the western front, were reported flashing southward across Hungary today in an apparent sequel to Britain's rupture of diplomatic relations with Rumania.

The planes were reported speeding in the direction of Rumania and Bulgaria.

Balkan capitals nervously speculated that Adolf Hitler might be starting a thrust into Bulgaria for an invasion of Greece or turkey.

Informed sources in London said Britain was expected to break diplomatic relations with Bulgaria if Nazi troops were admitted into that Balkan country.

Dispatches from Budapest said 31 of the giant tri-motor planes flew over the Hungarian capital alone, swooping so low their markings were plainly visible.

There was no immediate explanation of the hurried reinforcement of Germany's armies in the Balkans, already estimated to number in the hundreds of thousands.

Military and political observers in Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia, declared however, that events were moving rapidly toward a climax in southeast Europe.

The crisis was accelerated, these observers said, by reports that Soviet Russia had notified Bulgaria she would not oppose a German march through Bulgaria toward Greece, Turkey and the Dardanelles.

Two Major Possibilities

As a result of swift-breaking developments in the past 24 hours, diplomatic circles in Belgrade foresaw two major possibilities:

That Hitler would serve an ultimatum on Bulgaria, demanding passage of German troops; or that Nazi columns now massed on the Rumanian frontier would simply begin moving across the Danube.

That Britain would declare war on Nazi-dominated Rumania and bomb the kingdom's rich oil fields, a vital source of Germany's fuel supplies.

Elsewhere, the war boiled toward the phase of "greater violence" forecast two days ago by Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

British warships shelled the Flanders "invasion coast" in the night, the German high command reported, but were driven off by Nazi coastal batteries.

R. A. F. bombers pounded the big German oil and rail center of Hanover for six hours, setting fires "too numerous to count," the London air ministry announced, and also attacked docks at Rotterdam, the Boulogne harbor, Cherbourg, Ostend, two airdromes in Holland and other targets in northwest Germany.

The German high command reported "a number of dead and wounded among the civilian population "resulting from the R. A. F.'s raids over northwest Germany, but asserted 33 British planes were destroyed yesterday and last night—the heaviest toll in weeks.

Four Planes Missing

The British said four of their planes were missing from the night forays.

It was the R. A. F.'s 27th attack on Hanover, a city of almost 500,000.

Hitler's high command also reported that Nazi combat planes smashed at British shipping in the Suez canal, sinking two vessels, and raided the British base at Malta, in the central Mediterranean.

Aside from the tense Balkan situation, diplomatic attention centered on an impending conference in Italy between Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain's leader, and, Swiss reports said, Premier Mussolini.

Official sources in Rome and Madrid were silent, but diplomatic dispatches to neutral Switzerland said the conference would be Mussolini's "supreme effort" to draw Spain into the war as an Axis ally.

Franco and Ramon Serrano Suner, his foreign minister and brother-in-law, were expected to

Friends Consider Krivitsky Victim Of Secret Police

New York Attorney Says Former Russian Spy Told of Man He Feared by Name of 'Hans'

WALTER G. KRIVITSKY

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—Chairman Dies (D.-Tex.) of the House committee investigating un-American activities today referred to the death of General Walter Krivitsky as "the biggest story of the year," and indicated he would produce "evidence" later relating to the case of the former Russian secret agent.

Krivitsky, who was a witness several months ago before the Dies committee, was found shot to death in the Bellevue Hotel here yesterday. A certificate of suicide was issued but police are holding the case open pending further investigation, after a friend of the dead man speculated that "an assassin might have counterfeited" the apparent suicide notes found in the Russian's room.

Dies was in closed conference with aides this morning, including J. B. Matthews, investigator who identified the body as that of Krivitsky, born Samuel Ginsburg.

The committee chairman told reporters he was preparing data to present to the House, which has under consideration a resolution to continue the committee's authority for another 15 months at a cost of $150,000.

Dies indicated, however, that he had gone over the Krivitsky case with Matthews and others and said he would have a statement to make as to "what happened to Krivitsky and what may happen to a lot of others."

Friends Doubt Suicide

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—Declaring that "an assassin might have counterfeited" apparent suicide notes found by the bullet-torn body of General Walter G. Krivitsky, a friend of the former Soviet Russian secret agent today urged a searching investigation of his mysterious death.

Four Persons Die In Philadelphia in Three Gas Blasts

Explosions Raze 2 Homes, Fire Destroys Seven Others; Patrolman Is One of Dead

Philadelphia, Feb. 11 (AP) — At least four persons were killed and two score injured early today in illuminating gas explosions that wrecked two homes in South Philadelphia and caused a fire which destroyed seven others.

One of the dead was Patrolman James Clark, who was crushed to death by a falling wall when he ran into a house in an attempt to rescue its occupants. Three bodies dug from debris were not immediately identified.

The first blast occurred at 5 a. m., and was followed in about 15 minutes by a second. A third came four hours later as rescuers were digging through the ruins.

The force of the explosions cracked the pavement in nearby streets and hurled chunks of asphalt into the air. Burning gas shot through the crevices. Windows were shattered in homes for two blocks, and many residents ran screaming from their homes.

Deputy Fire Chief William Simmler laid the explosions to illuminating gas, but had no further explanation.

23 Taken to Hospital

At least 23 persons were taken to hospitals. Many others were treated at the scene by physicians and nurses.

The place is in the heart of South Philadelphia's thickly-settled Latin quarter. The homes wrecked by the first two blasts were on opposite sides of the same street.

Fire spread quickly through the row of houses. Occupants were routed by police. The area was roped off.

Rescuers saved three policemen who were buried when a wall tumbled into the street.

Joseph Ciliberti, 47, who fled his home with his family when windows were shattered, said he saw a man and a boy, their clothing afire, run from one wrecked building.

"I heard the explosion and looked out the window, Ciliberti said. "The front of the house at 1112 Greenwich street was lying in the street. Out of the smoke and wreckage I saw the man and his son. The man was on fire. The son was almost naked. I ran down and pushed them into my house.

Friend of Lincoln Would Live Two More Years to See What F. D. R. Would Do

Los Angeles, Feb. 11 (AP)—Col. Charles E. Ellis, who lays claim to 102 years and a friendship with Abraham Lincoln, says he wants to live two years more "just to see what this man Roosevelt's going to do."

Col. Ellis, a West Point graduate with army service beginning in 1861, said he was born at a farmhouse in what now is Brooklyn, N. Y., March 15, 1838, his family going shortly afterward to Illinois to take care of a farm owned by his grandfather.

"Grandpa had the farm next to Lincoln's," he said. "When I was only a boy I used to go down to the wooden fence of mornings to see Abe Lincoln. He was just a gawky farmer then.

"Many was the time he held me on his knee."

Col. Ellis said he was in government service until 1925, the last 30 years in the civil service department. He is full of stories of army life but declares his chief interest is in the outcome of the present world crisis.

"This country was never in better shape than it is now," he said. "You can say all you want, but that's what it comes down to. The best friends I ever had, the only two real friends, were the dollar bill and Uncle Sam."

Col. Ellis walks from the small hotel where he lives to a restaurant a block away for each of his meals.

School Physicians Inspect Throats As Check on Fever

Officials Feel Examinations May Reveal Possible Scarlet Fever Cases Among Pupils

Dr. H. W. Keator, medical inspector for the Kingston schools, assisted by Dr. Johnston and the four school nurses, is having a throat inspection of every student in the high school and the Myron J. Michael School made every morning this week.

The inspection is primarily to diagnose possible cases of scarlet fever at the outset and as a result two pupils were sent home from the high school on Monday.

Queried this noon as to reports that large numbers of pupils had been sent home and that there was talk of closing the school, Dr. Keator said that no startling condition had been found and that there was no "epidemic."

Only 17 Cases

He said that so far but about 17 cases of scarlet fever had been reported in the entire city, with its some 6,400 school children, and not all of these cases were attendants on the schools. For the year so far there had been perhaps a dozen cases in the high school and the Myron J. Michael School. Of the cases found three were out of town pupils.

Dr. Keator said that it had been a rule that any cases of sore throat were to report to the medical office, but some pupils failed to mention the fact that they were suffering from sore throat. To make sure that all such cases were noted and cared for, the daily inspection this week was ordered. "There has been no suggestion of closing the school," Dr. Keator said, "we are simply taking precautions. There is no epidemic."

Many Pupils Are Out

Many pupils have been out of school of late, as many as 200 on one day last week, but that was due to the prevalence of colds and grip, respiratory diseases, and not unusual at this season of the year.

At the board of health office this noon it was stated that nine cases of scarlet fever had been reported in the city in January, seven of these being children of school age. So far in February eight cases have been reported and there were two or three cases that were con-

Rabies Ban Is Placed Upon Kingston Again

New Order in Dogdom

Freeman Photo

This dog posed today with his last summer's muzzle to show how a well-groomed canine will look when he appears in public in compliance with the State Health Department's quarantine in this city to prevent the spread of rabies. Does he like it? No, but it can be taken off when he eats.

State Notifies City Health Officials of Six-Months' Order Against Dogs

Kingston is again under quarantine for rabies among dogs as the result of the discovery of a rabid dog on Hurley avenue on February 1.

Word of the placing of the ban was received this morning by Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, from the state health department. The quarantine will be in force for at least six months.

Dr. Sanford said this morning that the state regulations covering a rabies quarantine will be enforced in the city, until the ban is lifted by the state health department.

Under the state regulations no dog must be allowed to roam the streets without wearing a muzzle. Dr. Sanford said, however, that he believed that if dog owners desired to exercise their animals they would be protecting their dogs from being bitten by other dogs by having them on a leash when they take them out on the streets.

Leash Considered Enough

If the dog on the street is being led by a leash, Dr. Sanford said that he did not believe it would be necessary for the animal to also wear a muzzle.

All dogs must be kept confined in the yard unless they are taken out for exercise by the owners. Dogs, unless they are confined in a pen or runway from which they cannot escape, must be kept tied up in the yard.

Dog Warden Andrew Griffin will be given orders to pick up all dogs found roaming the streets without muzzles, unless the dog is on a leash and in charge of a responsible person.

Last year with the discovery of a rabid dog in the city in March the state health department imposed a rabies quarantine that was not lifted until October 15 of that year. During that period three rabid dogs were found in the city, but no persons were afflicted with the rabies.

The first case of rabies last year was found in a stray, white poodle. The owner of the poodle was never discovered, and it was thought that the animal had strayed into the city.

The rabid dog that has caused the present rabies quarantine was owned by a Hurley avenue resident near the city line. The dog was taken sick on Saturday night, February 1, and Dr. Harold Clarke, the city's sanitary inspector who is a veterinarian, was called and administered treatment to the animal and then placed it in the cellar for the night.

During the night the family heard the animal running around the cellar but did not go near the dog as they believed it was mad. Sunday morning the dog was found dead on the cellar floor.

Dr. Clarke took the head of the dog to Albany where laboratory tests showed that the animal was afflicted with rabies.

Later last week another dog on Howland avenue was taken ill suddenly and it was believed that the animal was afflicted with rabies. Saturday Dr. Clarke took the head of the dog to Albany for testing.

Word has been received from the laboratory in Albany that further tests have to be made before

Defense Board Uses Pressure

Effort Being Made to End Allis-Chalmers Strike at Milwaukee

(By The Associated Press)

The defense commission brought its influence to bear today in an effort to end the three-weeks-old Allis-Chalmers strike which has tied up production on $40,000,000 worth of arms orders.

Commission members planned a conference with representatives of the Allis-Chalmers management and of the CIO United Automobile Workers, which called the strike at the Milwaukee plant. The CIO seeks a union shop and other concessions.

The work stoppage has affected machinery needed for naval vessels, and for the army's gunpowder production program. Management officials talked to Secretary of Navy Knox yesterday and reported some "helpful suggestions" had been made for removal of finished and partly finished orders from the picketed plant.

In Cleveland, meanwhile, 80 CIO electrical workers were on strike at the Hertner Electric Co., which has orders for submarine and destroyer generators. The walkout, ordered yesterday, was described by the union as a protest against dismissal of its shop chairman. A company official asserted, however, that the man had been discharged for "valid reasons."

Members of the C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers Union went on strike at the Vanadium Corporation of America at Niagara Falls, which makes alloy for steel construction and has defense contracts. Union leaders who said the strike was "100 per cent effective" among 300 employes, called the walkout after negotiations failed for a 15-cents-an-hour wage increase.

In a speech at Chicago, Governor Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin said that President Roosevelt "must put his foot down and say to labor: 'No more strikes in this emergency.'"

Says Assistance Should Not Be Hampered by Dubious Red Tape of Bills

Manhattan Mayor Says Plans to Defend U. S., Canada Ready

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today that the only way Congress can aid Britain "quickly enough" is to enact the administration's British aid legislation "with modifications." He urged sending Britain five to ten destroyers a month.

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee, appearing in the Senate's big marble-walled caucus room where packed hundreds had waited for hours to hear him, declared in a prepared statement that Britain needs both "immediate" and "long term" assistance.

Willkie returned to this country Sunday from a flying tour of the British Isles.

As an example of "immediate aid," he told the committee that "if we are to aid Britain effectively we should provide her with from five to ten destroyers a month.

Directly and Swiftly

"We should be able to do this directly and swiftly rather than through the rigamarole of dubious legalistic interpretations.

"Incidentally, if we are to make more destroyers available to Britain we should recondition them in this country in our own yards."

As for modifications, Willkie said it would be "wise" to limit the proposed aid to the British Commonwealth, China and Greece.

Willkie told the committee that in discussing the legislation "we must not hide important facts and we must have the courage to draw the proper inferences from the facts—democracy cannot live by dodging around corners."

Willkie said he believed a policy of "isolation" eventually would destroy civil liberties in the United States and would bring economic upheaval.

The witness, last to be heard by the committee, declared that Britain would require some time, even with American planes, to attain superiority in the air."

Ineffective Aid Bad

"To render ineffective aid would be disastrous," he continued. "Ineffective aid would give Hitler just as good a pretext against us as effective aid.

"But if our aid is ineffective Britain may go down."

Willkie expressed approval of provisions made in the House to set a time limit on the powers granted the President in the British aid bill and authorizing Congress to terminate the program by a majority vote of both houses.

A study of the bill's provisions, he added, had forced upon him the conclusion that "the only way to render aid quickly enough is to pass this bill with modifications."

"All modifications should seek to limit any unnecessary authority granted in the bill," he continued. "I have gone the full limit of my conscience in supporting the

W.P.A. Plans Cuts

Rolls Will Be Sliced Third by Summer; Saving to Be $120,000,000

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—The W. P. A. plans to cut its employment rolls one-third by summer—and hopes that the defense program and industrial expansion will absorb those dismissed.

Howard O. Hunter, acting commissioner of the Works Project Administration, told the House appropriations committee that he plans to reduce the rolls from 1,950,000 this month to 1,300,000 in June and save an estimated $120,000,000.

A committee report with this information went to the House yesterday just before it began consideration of a supplemental appropriation of $375,000,000 to finance the W. P. A. until July 1. Congress last year appropriated $975,650,000 for the first eight months of the fiscal year, or until March 1.

Overbagh and Miss Isabel Overbagh and the evening's committee, Mrs. Howard Goetchius and Mrs. Frank G. Phelps were assisted by Mrs. Bartow V. V. Matteson and Miss Mildred Goetchius. Among the guests present were Mrs. Paul Lynker of Mt. Marion and the Misses Evans, Johnson, Williams and Winters of the Saugerties schools.

REUNITED WITH MASTER

Desperately ill and inconsolable since Private Everett Scott (left) was called to army duty at Chanute, Kas., three months ago, Laddie, the soldier's 10-year-old Airedale, was reunited with his master in Monterey, Calif., after a 2,000-mile trip by plane and auto. Normal School News

Under the sponsorship of the vandenBerg School of Practice, New Paltz, a conference on Elementary Education will be held at Lake Mohonk, May 23 to 24.

The conference is for elementary principals, classroom teachers and others interested in the problems of the grades. The area in which interest is sought is Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess, Rockland, Orange, Sullivan, Ulster, Green, and Columbia counties. Upon a frequency basis, problems suggested by those attending, will be selected for discussion.

B. H. Matteson, director of training at the vandenBerg School of Practice in New Paltz, is working on the off-campus senior cadet program which will be put into effect next year.

It is the plan to make the program much more elastic than it has been in the past.

A large number of schools in Westchester, Putnum, Dutchess, Rockland, Orange, Ulster, and Green counties are interested in participating. This is also true of a number of school systems on Long Island.

The cadet program will aim to establish training affiliation with as many schools as possible and because of the greater number interested centers, maintain an unusual degree of flexibility.

Plans for enlarging the scope of the Film Center sponsored by the van den Berg School of Practice in New Paltz, are underway. Membership in the Film Library is limited to 30 schools. A number of new films of special value to the elementary school will be added to the 50 sound films which the library now owns.

GRANGE NEWS

Ulster Grange, No. 969

Ulster Grange No. 969 Service and Hospitality Committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Hendrikx, is sponsoring a Valentine party on Friday evening, February 14, commencing at 8 o'clock in the Ulster Park Community Hall.

There will be dancing, active games, bridge and pinochle for those who wish to play cards and other special features. A good time is promised all who attend. This party is open to the general public and all will be most welcome.

The refreshments will consist of box lunches. All women attending will have to bring with them a box lunch for two. That will be their admission. The men will bid on these boxes and upon getting a box will find the woman who made it up and share it with her. This bidding will be the only charge made during the evening. Coffee will be served by the committee.

The next regular meeting of the Grange will be held on Wednesday, February 19, at which time a "Constitution" program will be presented by the Lecturer, Sister LeFevre. The lecturer has made up her program for the year and it can now be had in printed form with the refreshment committees for the year. There is a worthwhile program for every meeting and every member is asked to be present at each meeting, so as not to miss these well planned evenings.

Income Tax

No. 14

Compensation of State Offices and Employes

All officers or employes of States, or political subdivisions thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, are required to include in gross income, for Federal income-tax purposes, the compensation received by them during the year as such officers or employes.

Retired officers and employes of States, and political subdivisions thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, who received in 1940 pensions or retirement annuities based on the services rendered by them while in active service as such officers or employes, are required to include such pensions or annuities in gross income for Federal income-tax purposes. If the pension or annuity is paid in whole or in part from a fund derived from amounts deducted from the compensation of such officer or employe while in active service, the amounts so contributed are considered the "consideration paid" for the pension or annuity. The amount received by the retired officer or employe shall be included in gross income each year to the extent of 3 percent of the "consideration paid," the balance of the annuity payments being excluded in determining gross income for that year. When the aggregate of the amounts thus excluded from gross income equals the "consideration paid," the entire amount thereafter received as a pension or annuity must be included in gross income.

These taxpayers are entitled to the same deductions and credits as are other taxpayers. Dues paid by teachers to professional societies, the price of their subscriptions to educational journals connected with their profession, and traveling expenses, including railroad fares and meals and lodging, incurred in attending teachers' conventions in the United States, if they are not reimbursed for such expenses, are deductible from the compensation received by them as teachers in determining net income for Federal income-tax purposes. Records of such expenditures should be kept to substantiate the deductions claimed.

Campaign expenses and contributions made to political parties or organizations at any time are not deductible. Campaign contributions received by a candidate for a public office are gifts, and not income, so are not required to be included in the gross income for Federal income-tax purposes.

Hitler Has Reason to Fear Attack on Eastern Front via Balkans

British Onslaughts In Africa Are Not As Axis Planned

Pincer Movement Visualized by Hitler and Il Duce Was Foiled by Greece

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Britain's vigorous move to counter Hitler in the Balkans means that at last John Bull is able to assume the initiative in that important theatre—a development which in itself is significant as showing England's growing strength.

This gesture of confidence has been made possible by the sweeping anglo-allied victories in the battle of the Mediterranean. At the moment, paradoxical though it seem, the master of the world's most powerful fighting machine would appear to be on the defensive in southeastern Europe. Certainly fate has switched the cards on him, and he is playing a different hand from what he expected when he began his Balkan adventure.

The point is that the shattering of the Fascist defenses in Africa is likely to release a large and wholly efficient allied military and naval force in the near future for possible operations in the Balkans. As I pointed out when Bengasi fell, British General Wavell then had completed an offensive which would enable him to choose as he wished from several further operations, one of which would be in the Balkins.

In short, the manner in which Mussolini's forces have been lathered, first by the hardy Greeks and then by the British and their allies, has so changed the complexion of the battle of the Mediterranean that, as I see it, Herr Hitler must fear the possibility of an attack on his eastern front through the Balkans.

That isn't the way the Hitler-Mussolini partnership read the stars some five months ago. When Il Duce invaded Egypt with so much dash and fanfare in September, the idea was that he should rush across the desert and capture the Suez Canal, while partner Hitler drove down the Balkans (if things looked auspicious) and battled his way through to the Suez from the east. The British thereby would be smashed like a beetle in this great pair of pincers.

Signed Quit-Claim

However, Mussolini signed a quit-claim to all that program, and to his African empire as well, when some strange impulse made him invade Greece. His debacle there and the catastrophes which piled up on him in Africa wiped the slate clean of one of the great strategic plans of the war.

Hitler's game now is to strengthen his hold on the Balkans for defensive purposes, and at the same time try to rescue the Fascist army from the Greeks in Albania. Thus we see him swamping Rumania with troops and turning the country into a military and naval base, and we see him reaching for Bulgaria.

The fuehrer's purpose has been to make his Balkan advance and consolidation peacefully if possible, for he doesn't want war at his back door at this critical juncture. However, having acquired Bulgaria he might be in position to aid Mussolini against the Greeks, and thereby weaken Britain's strong position. In any events, his move would be calculated to compel the British to maintain powerful naval, air and land forces in the eastern mediterranean while the Germans made a direct assault on England.

Apparently, however, Britain isn't having it quite that way. There certainly are signs of aerial action in the British severance of relations with Rumania and in the warning to Bulgaria that she will be bombed if she allows the Germans to use her territory as a base.

It is now Britain who is providing the distraction in the Balkans for the Nazis, just as the latter are preparing for another mighty onslaught on England. The insistence in Berlin by a German military spokesman that a two-front war isn't in the realm of possibility lacks conviction in view of developments. The Germans may have a two-front war thrust upon them in due course.

If we could peep into the minds of the British command for a couple of ticks, we might get some badly needed hints. For instance, one would like to know at what juncture Turkey might join Britain under their defensive alliance.

It is hard to believe that the British are challenging the Nazis in the Balkans without assurance that the Turks are going to put those two million bayonets into action on the allied side if necessary. Still, Russia's reported notice to Bulgaria that the Soviet won't use force to oppose a Nazi troop movement into Bulgaria might change the picture. At the moment that is a speculative point.

Of the quota of 15 drafted men who left Kingston on Monday afternoon for induction into the federal army two were rejected at the Albany induction station that day, according to word received by the Kingston Selective Service Board.

Of the 15 men sent away yesterday there was one substitution. Alfred E. Finnigan, now of Port Ewen, was granted a temporary deferment because of business reasons, and his place was taken by Christian Paul Bauer of 21 German street, a volunteer.

William D. Costello of 237 West Chestnut street, a clerk in the office of the Homeseekers Savings and Loan Association on Ferry street, was in charge of the quota with Bauer named as his aide.

Printer Takes Quantity Of Type-Cleaning Fluid

Newton V. Swart, 27, of 37 Lucas avenue, a compositor employed on The Leader, was reported in apparently fair condition this morning at the Kingston Hospital where he was rushed shortly after midnight in the Conner ambulance from the newspaper plant.

According to the police report Swart, who had been in ill health, drank a glassful of typecleaning fluid, which is a solvent composed largely of benzine, mixed with other chemicals.

It was shortly after midnight when another employe saw Swart enter another room and a few minutes later they heard a thud and rushing into the room found him lying on the floor.

Held on Warrant

Alexander Levy, 38, of 16 Chambers street, was arrested Monday afternoon by the police on a Poughkeepsie warrant charging him with petit larceny. That evening City Judge Matthew V. Cahill fixed bail in the sum of $500 which was furnished and Levy released to await a hearing in Poughkeepsie on February 17. He is a salesman for a soft drinks concern.

Local Man Given Term at Clinton Prison, Dannemora

Judge Conway held a brief session of county court at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, following which court was adjourned to 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Maurice J. Walsh of 492 Wilbur avenue, indicted by the October grand jury on a charge of sodomy complainants being the parents of a five-year old boy, appeared with his attorney, Thomas J. Plunket and entered a plea of guilty to the charge.

Plunket told the court that it was the first time his client had ever been in trouble of any kind, that he was intoxicated at the time the affair in question took place and that already he had been confined four months in the county jail.

District Attorney Haver said that the particular type of crime for which Walsh had been indicted was becoming more or less prevalent, but that it was not, in the defendant's case, a course of conduct that had extended over any appreciable period of time and he believed that a jail sentence of not too long a period of time was indicated. He added that the parents of the boy were not vindictive in their attitude.

Judge Conway sentenced Walsh to an indeterminate sentence of from two to four years in Clinton prison, at Dannemora.

Martin D. Comeau appeared for George H. A. Masselman, writer, for dismissal of an indictment on a charge of abandonment, which has been pending since November, 1937. District Attorney Haver said that, as in all cases of this kind, the intent of the action had been to provide for the support of the child.

The child is now 16 years of age and Mr. Masselman was willing to have the $250 cash bond he had posted turned over to his wife in case the indictment was dismissed. Judge Conway was agreeable to the proposition and ordered the indictment dismissed following the signing of the necessary papers.

William M. Davis of New York city, indicted on a charge of theft of money and jewelry from a Walker Valley woman, appeared before the court and asked that an attorney be assigned. The Judge announced that he would assign an attorney when court opened Thursday morning.

CRUSADE

By NORMAN CHANDLER
Chairman, Newspaper Publishers Committee

NORMAN CHANDLER

ABOUT thirty million good citizens will have a chance to read this. It is a plea. It is an urgent plea for every one of you to enlist with us in a "drive" we have in mind.

This "drive" is for a very great goal—a better America.

Now I know that no one of us can do very much alone—any more than one soldier can win a war. But together—and with almost no effort—we can raise the strength of this great democracy of ours to unbelievable heights.

Perhaps I ought to call this proposal of mine a game, for it can become that.

Here is how you play it:

Start with this copy of your newspaper. Pick out of it one—just one—item of news which you think is important in making America better, stronger, a finer place to live.

Don't pick a selfish thing—something which would benefit you or your town at the expense of some other person.

For example, you'll be tempted, if you're a schoolteacher, to approve some news which favors schoolteachers. If you're an orange grower you'll have to resist a cheer if a frost nips half the orange crop, leaving you untouched, with higher prices for your own oranges.

Pick out an item about an advance in medicine or a story of a new industry which makes good and needed jobs for a thousand men. Or pick a report of a good sermon or a fine, statesmanlike speech by a congressman.

Then spread this story. Tell a neighbor. Simply say to him, "I saw in the paper that so-and-so has done this-or-that."

Sound silly? It isn't at all. Do you realize that the whole nation—the 130 million of us—is merely the product of all the good and the bad that we do? And if more of us actively approve the good and unselfish and actively deplore the bad, we'll encourage more goodness and discourage the unsound, the evil, the dangerous.

* * *

After all, the very reason for newspapers existing in America is to bring you the record of what is going on. You wouldn't be qualified to take part in governing the district, the state or the nation you live in if you didn't know what was happening or what the news meant to you and your neighbors.

Try this crusade with us, will you? It won't be much trouble, but if thirty million good citizens just told one good thing to thirty million others every day we'd have a nation so strong and with such a spiritual unity that nothing could break it.

* * *

AMERICA'S GREAT MEN

No doubt the people of every troubled era look into their history and long for the "great men" of earlier days. To many Americans today Washington and Lincoln seem to have been wise, noble and beyond criticism. The historian and student of history, however, know that although they were wise and great men, they were not infallible and certainly not free, in their day, from sharp and angry criticism.

It comes as something of a shock for people to read that a New York editor called Lincoln "an ignorant Western boor", and that men in his cabinet considered themselves his superior in many ways. Charles Beard, relating such facts, wrote of Lincoln: "And yet the severest of his critics was arrested by something impelling about the personality of Lincoln—something transcending the roughness of the frontier." He was president of the United States in one of its most terrible hours, and he measured up "in full length to his Augustan authority and responsibility."

Lincoln himself wrote to a friend, "I claim not to have controlled events but confess plainly that events have controlled me." By which he did not mean that he drifted, or avoided whatever action was called for. The truth about Lincoln, more than the myth, makes him great, and his life and public career should revitalize any flagging faith in democracy.

WARSHIPS ON THE LAKES

One of the strongest American traditions and practices is the neutralization of the Great Lakes as regards armament. Since the year 1817 when President Monroe signed a treaty with Great Britain, we have had no war craft on those waters except a couple of gunboats for Canada and the United States, used for internal revenue control. In the last war many small war vessels known as "Eagle" boats were built at Detroit for our navy, but apparently they were not armed until they reached the Atlantic Ocean.

Now plans have been prepared, and a bill signed by Congress, whereby our government will build in Great Lakes ports a large number of "mosquito torpedo boats, destroyers, submarines and gunboats." Apparently these vessels are expected to be armed before they are delivered on the seacoast for naval use. It may be, too, that some of them will be kept in the Lakes for patrol duty.

If the plans are as reported, this procedure is one that would ordinarily be viewed with alarm and indignation by the Canadian government.

It makes a difference, no doubt, when the two countries are acknowledged allies and the United States is definitely committed to defend Canada against alien attack. Uncle Sam is not likely to take armed advantage of his best friend and neighbor. The change, however, is worth noting. And if we override the old rule on the Lakes, it may be expected that Canada will do likewise.

AVOCADO GARDENERS

Have you a growing avocado in your home? Experimenting with this plant, it appears, is the favorite indoor sport of many amateur gardeners. They are moved to see if they can make the queer seed sprout and grow.

A batch of letters to a gardening editor tells the story. One enthusiast said she merely scattered a number of avocado seeds over her porch boxes last summer just before she left for a ten-day trip. When she got home she felt like Jack of beanstalk fame, for her porch boxes were full of 18-inch high plants.

Another experimenter put the seed in a flower pot filled with ordinary soil. It was two months before a shoot appeared, but in two years she had a plant nearly five feet tall. A pet dog chewed up another plant, but the seed merely sprouted again.

Others have grown the plants in water or in sand. Some have found they grow tall quickly. Others have had to wait longer for results. All agree that the results are surprising and fascinating in one way or another.

But what progress is indicated from the days when an alligator pear was a rare, exotic and expensive treat! It was liked or disliked as fanatically as caviar. Today so many people serve it so often at the family dinner table that housewives are able to experiment with the seeds, as related above.

HOW CAN THEY HELP?

"The well-to-do women of America are in a jam," writes one of them in a letter to the New York Times. "They don't know what to do, in the present national situation. The only weapon they possess besides their knitting needles is their purchasing power. How should they use it?

"Shall the two-year-old car, the three-year-old fur coat, the four-year-old slip covers, all still at the top of their form, be discarded for new? In this way would they keep men at work and other people's purchasing power up?

"It has been suggested that women give a year to being trained for their country's good. Fine for the young people, perhaps, but the older ones have families, dogs and rheumatism."

Women of her class are quite serious about it, she says; they want to know. Maybe some readers can suggest a way.

FEARLESS SINGING

A lecturing professor recently accused this age of "puerility" and gave as an illustration of his meaning the fact that the passengers on the sinking City of Benares in 1940 sang "Roll Out the Barrel" as the ship went down. In 1912, he reminded his audience, the passengers on the sinking Titanic sang "Nearer My God to Thee."

The professor is likely to get a good deal of argument against his viewpoint. Some people will say the important fact in each story is that the people sang. They were courageous in the face of death and helped to maintain order and support their own morale by singing. What they sang might very well have depended on the inspiration of the individual who started the singing.

Many persons will find an extra bit of courage in the barrel song, since it suggests laughter and defiance of fear rather than resignation. But it is foolish to try to measure degrees of courage or seriousness in different groups of brave people. The singing's the thing.

GETTING RID OF PIN WORMS

One of the distressing ailments of young children is pin worms as the intensive itching gets gradually worse toward evening and is at its worst at bedtime. During the night there is sleeplessness or a disturbed sleep with night terrors. The child loses weight and his blood becomes thin. Parents are able to find the little worms in the stool.

The prevention of infection or aggravation of the symptoms can often be affected by keeping the finger nails clean and cut short and washing the hands many times a day.

Getting rid of these tiny worms which look like short pieces of white thread is sometimes difficult. In my student days we were taught that giving tablets of santonin and calomel and enemas of an infusion of quassia chips was considered the most effective treatment.

For many years the routine treatment in children's hospitals has been enemas of infusion of quassia chips every morning for seven to ten days. Two ounces of quassia chips are put in a quart of water and water allowed to boil down to one pint. The water is then strained free of the chips and used as an enema. This whole process is repeated each morning for the week or ten days, water being allowed to cool, of course.

A new treatment that may take the place of these other methods is gentian violet now used in staining organisms and injection of vessels. Its effectiveness was first reported by Drs. W. J. Wright, F. J. Brady, and W. H. Bozicevitch in Journal of the American Medical Association.

Drs. Max J. Miller, Laurent Choquette, Wilfred Audet, R. F. Kelso and J. A. Guenette in the Canadian Medical Association Journal report their results in the use of gentian violet in tablet form in 29 school children ranging from 6 to 13 years of age. The tablets were given over a period of 10 consecutive days, the children 6 to 9 getting two 3/20 grain tablets three times a day and those 10 to 13 years of age getting a ½ grain tablet three times a day. These gentian violet tablets cleared away the pin worms in 26 of the 29 cases.

JUST IN CASE . . . By Bressler

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — If Attorney General Robert H. Jackson has his way, one of Uncle Sam's employes will try to get you out of jail after U. S. officers have thrown you in.

Jackson approves federal legislation which would create federal public defenders in addition to the present public prosecutors.

The legislation isn't without its opponents. Some legal minds argue it's unnecessary and wasteful.

It might seem funny that the attorney general, as big boss of FBI and the federal prosecutors, would be concerned with adequate counsel for accused persons, but he says it's progressive legislation.

"The present practice of having indigent defendants represented by assigned attorneys acting without pay is frequently unjust to the defendant and unfair to members of the bar, and occasionally results in inadequate presentation of the defendant's rights," he says.

* * *

Say It Works This Way

The plan's advocates say the present system works this way: You're Joe Doakes, without a dime to your name, and for some reason you get the come-along from a G-man. After you have been indicted, the judge asks where is your attorney. You say you cannot afford a lawyer, so he names one.

If you're assigned an inexperienced lawyer, he may be so excited that a cagy prosecutor can tie him in knots.

If you draw a veteran, he may brush you off as an onerous and unwelcome chore.

* * *

See Grave Error

Opponents of the plan argue that placing the public defenders under the attorney general's supervision would be a grave error. The federal prosecutors are also under the attorney general, who would then be in the position of directing the efforts of federal officers whose purposes were diametrically opposed.

Others argue that the problem can be handled by the bench and the bar, without setting up a new governmental bureau. They say exacting judges can really put the heat on experienced lawyers who fail to do their duty, and that young attorneys can gain experience they need if the judges also assign older men to counsel them.

Cites State Courts

Jackson, in his recommendation for public defenders in replies that the system has been his 1939 and 1940 annual reports, widely adopted in state courts and has proved satisfactory everywhere.

"Public defenders are no longer a novelty," he wrote. "The subject has long passed the experimental stage. It would be a long step forward in the administration of criminal justice."

An elaborate "plumbing" system of oxygen pipes into which crew members may plug lines is one of the latest innovations in U. S. army bombers.

England's Hour
By Vera Brittain

It is a foregone conclusion that Vera Brittain will be able to tell America nothing very new in her "England's Hour," which she publishes on this side today. Obviously Miss Brittain has no special pull with the censor, and just as obviously, the horde of correspondents in England has given us the story of the Battle for England. When all the data can be released, they will give us that as well.

But Miss Brittain can tell us exactly how she believes in the Blitzkrieg, how her neighbors behave, how the face of the land looks and what one does when death rains down. She also can tell how a person reacts who, like most liberals of leftish tendencies, believed in the possibility of peace after the last war, felt it was being ruined by the machinations of the "statesmen," and now finds the worst has come true. Miss Brittain had to undergo a severe course in self-examination and reorientation when at last she became convinced that England must fight or die.

All this and more comes out of "England's Hour." It is a book that makes "Mrs. Miniver" look like a piece out of "College Humor." It is written out of Churchill's "blood and toil and tears and sweat." Miss Brittain and her husband came flat up against such facts as sending their children abroad, alone; against the solemn inquisitions at which conscientious objectors were sorted out and disposed of; against the necessity of riding face down on the floor of trains, and clawing through fantastic debris after equally fantastic raids. For her the weeks of subterranean life are actual, and she makes them actual to her reader. Just so, she makes actual and mental and spiritual shifts which have become inevitable, and the way in which fear acts upon a mind hitherto able to rationalize its problems.

This is a very meager outline of "England's Hour", and omits much of importance. Although tomorrow some other book may come out of England telling the same story, and better, I believe this is so far the best statement of what war means to a people who believe in "live and let live," and how it affects a woman accustomed to use her brain fearlessly. Even so, I think its author has occasionally been a little unfair to certain public figures, and a little too kind to some others.

Today in Washington

Mr. Churchill's Most Recent Broadcast Stressed Point That British Do Not Desire A. E. F.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 11—The biggest argument that the fear-of-war groups have had has been pretty well riddled by the authoritative pronouncement of the head of the government of Great Britain, who says American troops are not expected in Europe either this year or next year or at any time thereafter.

It was a slight slip of the pen in Winston Churchill's statement a few weeks ago wherein he foreclosed the possibility of American troops coming to Europe in 1941 that raised a quibbling inquiry here to the effect that he had not eliminated 1942 or 1943.

When Mr. Churchill, therefore, flatly says now he does not expect an American expeditionary force at any time and gives his reasons—namely, that this is not a war of man-power, but of machines—he disposes summarily of a very influential point which has been used over and over again in Congress in an attempt to beat the all-aid-to-Britain bill.

Never from the beginning has President Roosevelt had in mind the sending of another A. E. F. to Europe. He was willing to have the last Democratic national platform include such a pledge and he has repeated it since. The real reason is that the war is going to be fought in the air and on the seas, and the British through their dominions have plenty of pilots and troops for such excursions as have to be made in the Mediterranean. Also if the fortunes of war should turn and a revived France should get momentum again there are plenty of troops among the French and Belgian and Czechoslovakian and Dutch peoples who could furnish the nucleus of counter-attacks.

But, it has been asked, why did the United States army order 4,000,000 identification tags and a lot of caskets? The answer is that the military mind prepares for war and for an eventuality while the head of the state and Congress make the policies. The fact that the United States Army is prepared for any and all contingencies even to the last detail is an important piece of information for foreign governments to know.

Though invasion of the United States may be considered remote, the presence of a big army ready to defend Latin America against counter-attacks from Nazi conquerors is expected to have a preventive influence. When an army is only half prepared, it is considered half-hearted and the diplomatic representations of its government are viewed with corresponding lack of respect.

The purpose of the United States government at the moment is to build a mobile army capable of being moved anywhere in the western hemisphere and to carry with it all the mechanical equipment necessary to ward off any other force. The army, of course, has been going on the very legitimate assumption from a military standpoint that the British navy would fall into German hands and that combined with airpower the Nazis could influence the collapse of free government in strategic places in Latin America.

This is the reason why preparations for defense of this hemisphere are necessarily elaborate and have been unfortunately misconstrued as meaning the possible dispatch of an expeditionary force to Europe.

The speech of the British prime minister on Sunday will help substantially in answering the fears that another A. E. F. is being planned. Mr. Churchill's magnificent statement was one of the most effective addresses in all the long history of British-American relations. The British prime minister was well-advised in striking out hard at the myth of Nazi invincibility which has been permeating Washington of late. He likewise was discreet in confining his appeal for American aid to the tools of war for it made the British appeal one which fits in with historic American policy, namely to furnish weapons of war to free nations—a policy now epitomized in President Roosevelt's apt phrase concerning the "Aresenal of Democracy."

There was a time here when opposition was aroused to the manufacture and sale of munitions as in itself provoking war, and though this point of view had to be fought at the expense of the accusation of munition profiteering there have been many in Congress and out who have insisted that it would be to the interest of dictatorships and despotic governments if America denied arms to weak nations.

It would appear that American policy now has been formulated for generations to come—there will be government manufacture of munitions and government encouragement of private plants capable of turning out weapons of war to the end that free nations may never again be placed at the mercy of tyrannical and scheming governments which depend on the gullibility of democracies. Never again will arms be withheld and it would not be surprising if the Kellogg-Briand treaties of the past are some day implemented so as to insure in war time a flow of weapons only to those nations which are the victims of aggression.

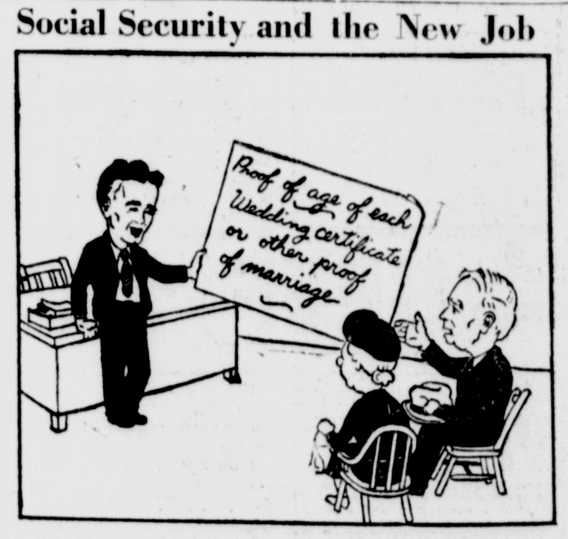
Social Security and the New Job



Employe over 65 years of age inquires at his local Social Security Board office about retirement benefits and about supplementary benefits for his wife who is also past 65. He is given a list of the things the office will need in connection with his applicatoin for benefits.

Many workers are now changing jobs or taking their first jobs as a result of the national defense program. Most of these jobs are covered by old-age and survivors insurance under the Social Security Act.

Charles E. Burke, manager of the Kingston Social Security Board office at the Post Office Building has prepared a series of eight brief articles for The Freeman explaining the steps each worker should now take in connection with his social security account to avoid delays or difficulties when he or his family are ready to collect insurance benefits.

Any worker who does not have a social security account number card can obtain one at the Social Security Board office.

No. 6

A worker who wants to claim his old-age and survivors insurance benefits at age 65 or any time thereafter can get an application form by writing or calling at his nearest Social Security Board office. With the form properly filled in, the worker will need to furnish some proof of his age. If his wife is past 65, she will also be entitled to benefits and should obtain and file a separate application form. She too will need to furnish proof of her age and, in addition, proof of her marriage to the worker.

There is usually little difficulty in obtaining a wedding certificate, but birth certificates of persons now 65 years old or more are comparatively scarce. If a birth certificate is not available, the Social Security Board office will advise claimants about other types of proof of age which will be acceptable.

Workers and their wives who are planning to file claims for old-age and survivors insurance benefits should obtain their proofs of age and marriage beforehand in order to avoid delay in getting their claims approved. Frequently it takes some time to locate such evidence as a church record of infant baptism or record from the family Bible.

Mound Indians' Culture Enigma

Smithsonian Scientist Says The Tribe Disappeared Before Columbus.

WASHINGTON.—A full flowering civilization, not essentially inferior to that of the Aztecs in Mexico or the Mayas in Yucatan, vanished without a trace in North America, probably a few generations before the first landing of Columbus. That is the conclusion of Frank Setzler, head curator of anthropology of the Smithsonian institution.

His thesis was constructed from such scattered clues as are available in the history of the Hopewellians, mound builders of the Ohio and Upper Mississippi valleys.

From the results of more than a century of research, Setzler explained in a study published by the institution, a tentative picture can be drawn of the ways of life of this mysterious people.

Construction of the large mounds, the surrounding earthworks and the hundreds of smaller mounds, he said, clearly required a dense population and a well co-ordinated society. This population must have had some stable economic basis.

Extensive Farming Needed.

"Hunting and fishing, no doubt, were of some importance as evidenced by barracuda jaws and other fish remains and by the representation of birds and animals in realistic carvings on pipes," Setzler said. "But even though direct evidence of maize is lacking, the practice of extensive horticulture must be admitted, because it alone could have supported the large population aggregates in which the Hopewell people obviously lived.

"The specific form of government organization cannot be known, but certainly some regimentation is indicated by the great communal work. I incline to deduce, from the widespread influence of these people, that if a select ruling class existed, they dominated a very large portion of the Mississippi valley. Possibly their political organization was a northern extension of the system that prevailed in Mexico and Yucatan, although very few specimens can be identified with Mexican deities. Copper head ornaments and colored woven garments decorated the fresh-water pearls and mica suggest insignia of authority. At least persons with such attire would be set apart."

Seen as Race Apart.

This strange civilization, Setzler believes was result of impact of two peoples, probably without definite conquest by either. A survey of the field shows the same culture, but in a simpler form, in the Lower Mississippi valley and around the Gulf coast. It appears to have moved northward until it came in contact with a more primitive but apparently vigorous and progressive people.

Then, perhaps by conquest and perhaps by absorption, the inventiveness and energy of the Northern Indians and the complex social organization and religious system of the migrants from the South were amalgamated—greatly to the improvement of both.

No clue has been uncovered, Setzler said, which permits the dating of this development more closely than sometime between the beginning of the Christian era and the coming of Columbus. There certainly were no Hopewellians left when the first white hunters and traders came into the Ohio valley, for not a single artifact of European origin ever has been found in the mounds. In fact, the country was then inhabited by woodland Indians who had no memory of their predecessors, or even legends concerning them.

Republicans to Cut Funds for Bills Asking 7 Millions

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11 (AP)—Republican legislative leaders poised an economy axe today over scores of bills calling for the spending of more than $7,000,000 above a proposed $385,000,000 state budget.

Totaling appropriation measures in both senate and assembly, the majority party's chieftains determined, they said, to consign "at least 90 per cent" of the bills to a legislative graveyard by refusing to report them for a floor vote.

The privately-pledged economy move preceded by only a few hours the arrival of hundreds of representatives of taxpayer, civic, business and labor organizations conferring in Albany on appropriation-cutting programs to be submitted at tomorrow's public hearing on the state's new budget.

5,000 Expected

Legislative developments as the lawmakers prepared to play host to an expected crowd of 5,000 at the budget airing included senate and assembly approval of a bill to reduce from 75 to 66 2/3 per cent the number of producer votes necessary to revise the state milk marketing order.

The measure which went to the governor for expected quick approval is designed to assure continued state participation in regulation of the New York city milk market in the event proposed amendments to the federal marketing agreement are adopted in Monday's voting.

The reduction in the number of affirmative votes necessary also brings the state balloting requirements into conformity with the federal regulations.

Some 60,000 dairymen in six states supplying the New York city market will vote in referendum which, if unfavorable, will result in suspension of the federal marketing order, Agriculture Secretary Wickard said.

Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York city, in a four-station radio appeal last night for a favorable vote, predicted 90 per cent of the producers would approve the changes they rejected in December.

Four Persons Die In Philadelphia in Three Gas Blasts

The residence at 1112 was the scene of the first blast, which blew out the walls and the roof and was followed by fire.

Samuel Rinaldi, 38, said he was leaving his house nearby when the second explosion occurred, and added:

"I saw two insurance patrolmen walk up the street and when the second blast happened they were picked up off their feet and thrown against the wall of a house across the street. They were both unconscious and I dragged them to a corner where they were put in a patrol car.

The Philadelphia Gas Works Company ordered 20 men out to seek the cause.

Gas was shut off in the block affected.

Rabies Ban Placed Upon City Again

it can be definitely stated whether the animal was afflicted with rabies.

In discussing the present quarantine which will now be clamped down on the dogs in the city Dr. Sanford said that he believed dogs would be better protected if they were kept on a leash when taken out on the street. In that case it would not be necessary, in his opinion, to have the dog muzzled.

Dr. Sanford said that he believed there was more danger of the spread of rabies by leaving dogs roam the streets unaccompanied even if they wore muzzles as they could be bitten by another dog having rabies and the owner would be unaware of the danger to which the animal had been exposed.

Unless further cases of rabies develop it is expected that the quarantine will be lifted within six months.

Fleet May Figure

In Africa, observers saw in the recent British capture of two Italian seaports—Bengasi in Libya and Mersa Taclai in Eritrea—a possibility that the British fleet may play an increasingly important role in the campaign to shatter Italian resistance.

The British navy is working swiftly to convert Bengasi's fine harbor into a base from which fleet units could stab at Italy herself as well as the remaining Fascist African stronghold at Tripoli.

Mersa Taclai offers a foothold on the Red Sea from which British land forces might move down the Eritrean coast toward the important Italian port of Massaua under protection of the fleet's big guns.

For the moment, General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's victorious forces in Libya appeared content to rest while consolidating their gains west of Bengasi to El Agheila, while the British drive through the center of Eritrea appeared stalled in the vicinity of Cheren, rail center 70 miles west of Massaua.

Brisk clashes were reported in Albania, with the Greeks claiming they inflicted heavy losses in four attempted Italian counter attacks.

Friends Consider Krivitsky Victim Of Secret Police

New York attorney, hurried here after the body was found in a $2.50 hotel room yesterday and disclosed that his client told him only recently of the arrival in New York of a man named "Hans."

"This man was known to Krivitsky as a deadly assassin of the OGPU (Soviety secret police)," Waldman said. "Since the arrival of Hans in the United States Krivitsky felt that his days were limited. He asked me to do certain things to get protection for him."

Although Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald earlier had issued a certificate of suicide, police said they would hold the case open.

The body, a .38 caliber bullet wound in the right temple, was taken to the morgue, but the results of the autopsy will not be known for several days. Detectives said a blood-stained revolver was clutched in the Russian's hand when he was found, and that his unpretentious room showed no signs of a struggle.

Coroner MacDonald said "we have been convinced that this was a suicide. But in view of the facts Mr. Waldman gave, we are going to keep the case open and run down all leads."

Widow's Story

Waldman's theory of possible assassination was backed by the Russian's widow, Mrs. Tanya Krivitsky, who said at her New York apartment that her husband was warned a month ago that a man was in this country seeking to kill him.

Coroner MacDonald, however, said the handwriting of three notes found by the body—one in Russian, another in English, and a third in German—was reported by police experts to be identical with that on Krivitsky's registration card at the hotel.

Krivitsky, who told the Dies committee he was born Samuel Ginsberg, had registered as "Walter Poref."

"It is very difficult and I want to live very badly, but it is impossible," read the police translation of a note written in Russian and addressed to "Tany and Alek," Krivitsky's wife and son.

A note in English to Waldman asked the attorney to help "my wife and boy." A third letter to "Suzanne" was written in German and likewise asked help for the widow and son. Waldman said Suzanne was one of the Russian's friends.

"The letters appear to be suicide notes," Waldman said, "but in the interest of the family and in the public interest, I have asked the authorities not to close the investigation.

Specimen of Handwriting

"Although the notes are in the handwriting of Krivitsky, it is well known that the OGPU, of which Krivitsky had been an official, had specimens of his handwriting. The OGPU is expert in counterfeiting handwriting and signatures of Krivitsky."

The little Russian with the grim, lined face gained national notice in October, 1939, when he declared in testimony before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities that "undoubtedly" there were Russian secret agents in the United States army and navy. He told the committee of House members that he broke with Josef Stalin's government in 1937 over the Russian "purge" carried out that year.

Before that, Krivitsky testified, he served for two years as chief of Russian military intelligence for all western Europe.

J. B. Matthews, Dies committee investigator, viewed the body late yesterday and exclaimed:

"It's Krivitsky, all right, and it's murder. I have no doubt of it."

Matthews asserted the Russian once told him "they'll get me sure as hell. The OGPU is going to assassinate Trotsky and me. When I'm dead, don't ever believe that I committed suicide."

Leon Trotsky, anti-Stalinist leader, was bludgeoned fatally with a pickaxe last year in Mexico.

Skjold—Fighting is all right providing you do it intelligently.

Bjones—Yes, but you can't always find a smaller opponent.

Your Temper

Every time a man "loses his temper," it shows that he is lacking in something, some basic quality needed if he is to succeed. When a man is in the right he can always afford to keep his temper. And when he is in the wrong he cannot afford to lose it.

Customer—Fifty cents for a shave? Why, your price has doubled.

Barber—Well, so has your chin.

We feel sorry for fat men. The average fat man has two chins to stick out.

School Teacher—Do you think paper can be used effectively to keep people warm?

Tom—I should say so! The last report card I took home kept the family hot for a week.

The average man's idea of a good sermon is one that doesn't last too long and goes over him and hits his neighbor.

"Do you know," said the young student at the agricultural college to an old farmer, "your methods of cultivation are a hundred years behind the time?"

Looking around he remarked, "Why, I'd be surprised if you made a dollar out of the oats in that field."

"So would I," smiled the farmer, "it's barley."

She (calling)—Painter, are you working?

Painter—Yes, ma'am.

She—I can't hear you working.

Painter—Good night, ma'am, did you think I'd be putting it on with a hammer?

As a household companion, a goldfish has certain advantages, the bachelor girl points out. He needs to be fed only once in three days, and you always know where he is and what he is doing.

And perhaps this time of year is the right season for a tender episode like this:

The handsome life guard floated lazily out into the cool, refreshing water—his eyes closed, his body relaxed and content. He suddenly felt a soft warm arm slide lovingly around his neck and still another glide tenderly, caressingly over his sleek black hair. His eyes remained closed. It was too perfect. Too romantic to stir. Slowly another arm closed around his chest. Then he languidly opened his eyes to greet this lovely maiden of his dreams. "Good Gravy! An octopus!"

By the way, people do not wish to be inspired. We know that because we have observed the attendance at inspirational meetings.

Mistress (to cook at 5:45 p. m.): "I know it's the third time this week, Mary, but my husband just phoned and he's bringing three men to dinner. How long will you need to get ready?"

Mary—I'm ready now. I packed my trunk the last time it happened.

It's just an idea—but if your neighbor keeps his radio going full blast until 2 a. m., give him a ring at 4 a. m. and tell him how much you enjoyed it.

Aviator—It's funny the way my plane crashed. I got into an air pocket.

Friend—Ah, and there was a hole in it.

If you take credit for what other persons do well, you should also take the blame for the things they do badly or fail to do.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

In looking through an old scrapbook the other day I came across an interesting item regarding the 16th annual auto show in Grand Central Palace in Uew York city which related that among the cars being exhibited was the Remington manufactured in Kingston.

I wonder how many of the older readers recall the days when the Remington concern turned out the Remington car at the plant on Grand street. The car displayed at the New York auto show in January, 1916, was a five passenger car of medium size and was priced at $795.

Older members of Kingston's police department will recall that one of the first automobiles ever used by the police department was an Emerson car manufactured at the Grand street plant. The Emerson did not remain long on the market, however.

It is also interesting to remember that the famous old Colonial Glee Club was revived in 1916 and that on January 17 and 18 in the old Kingston Opera House presented an amateur minstrel show that was tops.

Dr. Edward E. Henry was interlocutor that year and the endmen were William G. "Bones" Merritt, Ezra A. Abrams, Burton Davis, Chester S. Osterhoudt, Tom Dolan and John Leonard.

The circle was composed of Philip Fitzpatrick, John E. McCarthy, Willis Hills, Elmer E. Burger, Abram Van Aken, Clyde E. Wonderly, Dr. Raymond Sanderson, Richter Zelliff, Frank Elston, Elmer E. Eastmead, Chris K. Loughran, Charles B. Finch, Dr. A. L. Hill, Emil F. Keuhn and Walter Weeks.

There was also a chorus of girls that year in the minstrels. The girls were the Misses Dora Mosher, Elizabeth Martin, Sarah Humphrey, Mary Heidecamp, Tessie Gellert, Hilda Rifenbary, Marjorie Davis, Helen Stern, Rose Wolf, Agnes Dorsey, Marguerite Keating and Rose Cullen.

One of the hits of the olio was a skit written by the late Mrs. George F. Chandler, who was also noted as an entertainer of real worth.

I also recall the clog dancing of John Fox and James Lawrence.

The minstrels played to crowded houses on both nights.

Addicts Chew to Music

The "chewing dens of Yemen" are filled night and day with addicts seeking to drown out the din of world conflict, it is reported in Sana, capital of Arabia Felix. The inhabitants have strongly declared their adherence to the cause of Britain. Yemen is full of mabrazes, chewing dens, just as American cities are plentifully supplied with cafes. Men, women and children chew "khat", made from a native shrub known as "the flower of paradise." The chewing is done to the rhythm of soft music in luxurious surroundings.

ALONG CAME CINDERELLA

By VIVIEN GREY

YESTERDAY: Lovely Daye has met Roger Cosgrave only twice and both times by accident. Yet despite the fact that Roger is the son of great wealth who lives on a great estate along the Hudson, and Lovely is a girl of the tenements, her beauty and her vivacity have come between Roger and the image of Emily, the girl he is about to marry. Lovely just has left Roger and returned to New York.

Chapter Six

Spending Money

IN the city Lovely stopped to shop before taking the subway down town.

Off the subway she stopped again in little shops, groceries and delicatessens along Seventh Avenue. Cold cuts. Cheese. Salad packed in a waxed container. Fancy buns. Cake. Gert was to have the day off. No cooking. And in summer they all loved such things.

Lovely all but fell in the door of the apartment, so laden was she.

"Greetings!" she called gaily.

Gert came hurrying out of the kitchen.

"Oh, Lovely!" almost tearful with joy at sight of her. "I was getting so worried! I saw Katie's mother down on the corner and she said you hadn't stayed there."

And then she became aware of the packages Lovely had dumped on the table.

"Look!" Lovely was undoing them. "Um! Better put it all in the ice box, or are you hungry?"

Lovely pushed the food to one side and was opening the other packages.

"Stockings for you Gert. We hadn't a pair between us—remember when you wanted to go to Molly's wedding? And a blouse for you. Gypsy like they're wearing." It went on for a delightfully long few minutes.

There were things for little Sunny too. When the last paper had been crushed into a ball and thrown into the waste basket Gert looked at Lovely in dismay

"But you didn't get a thing for yourself!"

"Well," Lovely hesitated, "I didn't need things as much as you."

"Oh, Lovely, you shouldn't be that way! You shouldn't. But you can borrow anything. Anything!"

Lovely laughed brightly at that and with a note of surprise:

"Maybe that's what I was thinking of," she said.

It was a natural thing. They'd always shared.

Then, the more practical of the two, Gert asked:

"How much you got left?"

Lovely was taken by surprise. She counted her money.

"Ninety cents," she said.

Then at Gert's suddenly serious face:

"Well, don't look so worried!"

"I know, but you must have spent an awful lot. Where did you get it?"

"You would ask, darling! A very kind man gave it to me."

"Joe? But he could never give you that much." Gert never objected to Lovely's taking small sums from Joe because after all the tiny chip diamond that still lay in the purse with the 90 cents meant they were engaged. Gert took such things seriously.

"No, sweetie pie, not Joe." Then at Gert's sharply alarmed look: "It wasn't what you're thinking at all!"

"Oh, Lovely you know I'd give you anything I've got. I——"

"I know," Lovely interrupted. "You'd give me your whole life and all its happiness but you're not going to. If you have to hand that gift over to Sunny someday that's different. But I'm not taking any such packages from my sister." An impulsive arm around her she kissed Gert's plain face.

"You're so beautiful, Lovely, you'd ought to have everything!" Gert said. "But Ring's having a tough time too. You know they haven't let him in the union yet. Looks as if he'll stay just helper all his life because he can't raise the dough to make it in."

Defending Ring, Lovely thought. Selfish quarrelsome Ring. Well that was love. And it was like Gert. But Gert was back on the old thought.

"Then what was it, Lovely?" she asked anxiously. "I know nobody's giving money away for nothing."

"You tell me darling," Lovely said lightly as she started putting things away. "I'm not good at guessing games. The nuns at the Home always said I was too pretty to be very bright!"

But things were pleasanter in the flat that night. Ring sat down to a cold dinner of especial tastiness, across from a wife who was cool and rested and somehow a little dressed up and prettier to look at than usual.

Lovely, looking at them, paused on the thought of what a difference a little money made.

"I've got to have it," she thought. "I've got to have it! Enough to smooth things. To beautify things." She'd never realized before how much money did mean. She had to have it. And Joe, who was calling for her soon, would never have it. He was caught in the same rut Ring was in. Helper. Truckers helper. Too many men in the union for the work there was. They were protecting themselves by making entrance requirements stiffer than ever. Joe would never get the money together for it.

Lovely was still thoughtful when Joe called for her. Ring invited him in and offered him beer. But there was a movie up the block Joe wanted to take Lovely to see.

"Stepping!" Ring said in clumsy good humor.

"If Lovely's willing," was Joe's reply.

"Say boy take it from me that girl's not willing. She's eager! One eager dame!"

Sometimes Ring's crude humor annoyed Lovely. But she ignored it. Her mind was occupied with other things. Ring hadn't offered Joe beer for weeks, in fact hardly spoke to him when he called, she reflected. That was what money did. It smoothed things so.

Emily

AT an estate on Hessian Hill, north of Croton, a party was in progress. Cocktails were being passed. Scotch was being poured. Laughter echoed musically on the August night air. The scent of costly perfume vied with the fragrance of petunias in the shadowy garden. The Hudson River far below was a silver ribbon between its black velvet banks. Occasionally a boat looking like a gaudy toy with its myriad lights moved silently over the silver. Cars on the Albany Post Road were like fireflies regimented into an orderly procession. Now and then the whistle of a train came pleasantly muted.

It was a perfect night. And to all appearances a perfect party. Paula Dane's parties were always an achievement in gayety. But for two people at least profound and ominous forces were working under the bright surface of the scene.

Emily Perry, pretty in an undisturbing way, and Roger Cosgrave had been caught up in a little chattering gossiping group, whose glasses clinked often and whose laughter was suggestively frequent and free.

"She's a gal with no presence but golly what a trail she leaves!" someone commented through his laughter. "Flaming if you ask me!"

"Don't be hard on Mari, boys and girls! She may be just an unhappy widow but she's eager!"

"Sugar puss go pawn that pout you're wearing for a face!"

Roger had listened to their light banter a thousand times before and been amused by it. Tonight it jarred. It seemed to destroy or at least interrupt a train of thought and he was impatient at the interruption.

Emily peered through the shadows at him. She slipped her hand through his arm.

"Come on," she said softly. It was a pleasantly cultivated voice in which it would be hard to imagine emotion ever reaching any noticeable pitch. Controlled. Elegant. "I want to look at the river."

Bored

WHERE a stone wall skirted the steep slope they stopped. Roger sat down on the low wall. Emily moved in close as she so often had but Roger's arm failed to close around her in the familiar way. She looked at him thoughtfully. Then:

"What is it Roger?" And when he didn't answer: "I asked you something, Roger."

"What?" He started from his dream. "What is it, Emily? I'm sorry!"

"Something is wrong, Roger? What is it? What has happened?"

"Nothing at all Emily. It's nothing! I've just been thinking."

"About what?"

"Oh, things," he said slowly, finally.

"That isn't much of an answer, Roger. You've been strange all evening and I can't understand it."

"Look, Emily, forget it, will you? It's nothing at all that's important to you," and then he added for her peace of mind, "to either of us. Perhaps its just this party getting on my nerves. Would you mind very much leaving?"

"Not at all, dear! I want to of course, if you do!" But her eyes were surprised as they peered at him through the soft night light.

They didn't bother saying good night to the others. That wasn't done. There was a theory in their set that it broke up the party and was selfish. So they slipped through the shadows to where Roger's car was parked.

With his hands on the wheel taking the car down the dangerously steep drive to the Albany Post Road Roger was aware of Emily's eyes on him in wonder, of an air of surprise about her.

"Don't mind me, Emily," he said. "I'm in a mood and I can't account for it. Tomorrow it will be gone." He tried to make it light and reassuring.

They drove up the Post Road past a little tavern where an orchestra played and figures danced crazily in the lighted windows. Past a great old house neglected and deserted that leered into the night as if defying time and the elements.

"Oh, it's so lovely out," Emily said leaning back and looking up at the clear warm stars.

Beyond a little willow bordered pond where water moved musically over a dam they swung right, up a hill to Emily's large, substantial home.

"Come in," Emily suggested. "Let's have a drink on the terrace. This night is too lovely to waste."

"Would you mind, dear, if I trotted along?" he asked. "I'm done up for some reason."

But Roger did not turn toward home when his car once more reached the Post Road. And he knew the impulse that turned him south toward New York was mad.

China Riches Return

Capital owned by overseas Chinese is flowing back steadily into China for investment, according to Chow Chih Kang, assistant director of the Overseas Affairs Board in Chungking. Chinese residents in Thailand alone have transferred more than $30,000,000 to Kunming, he said. Since war began in Europe, most of the Chinese living abroad have been transferring their fortunes to Kunming. Kang suggested a central organization to see that the money is used to the greatest advantage.

Facts of Crash in Which Mrs. Thomas Was Injured

Jacksonville, Fla.
Feb. 9, 1941

Editor, Kingston Freeman,
Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Editor:

To correct the erroneous stories that are being circulated in reference to our accident of Monday, February 3, I feel I should give you the facts for publication.

We were approaching the city of Jacksonville, Florida, at about 4:30 o'clock. Traffic was very heavy. The line had slowed down. Coming over a slight rise in the highway, then a gentle slope on a brick pavement (in none too good repair) we skidded. The first city stop light was ahead. There were six cars ahead of my car, all in motion, as I drove toward the light, the car ahead of my car, struck the car ahead of it, then I struck a large mud puddle which seemed to add speed to my car. There were four cars banged, my car being last. The other three cars drove away under their own power.

Mrs. Thomas, sitting with me, struck the dash of our car breaking her right kneecap. She was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, which is considered the finest and most modern in the city, where she is receiving expert attention.

Dr. Charles B. Mabry, one of the most noted orthopedic doctors in this section of the state operated. He expects her to be discharged in a short time. At which time we will return home by train.

I was not injured.

The front of the Buick was damaged. It will be turned over to me in a day or two.

The people here have been more than considerate.

Trusting this statement will put to rest the wild stories that are being told, I am

Respectfully yours,
HERBERT E. THOMAS,
Hotel Roosevelt,
Jacksonville, Fla.

P.S.: Kind personal regards to you.

A decade ago the United States was largely dependent upon imports of potash originating in Germany and France. Today there exists a domestic potash industry of sufficient size to meet all anticipated requirements of the near future.

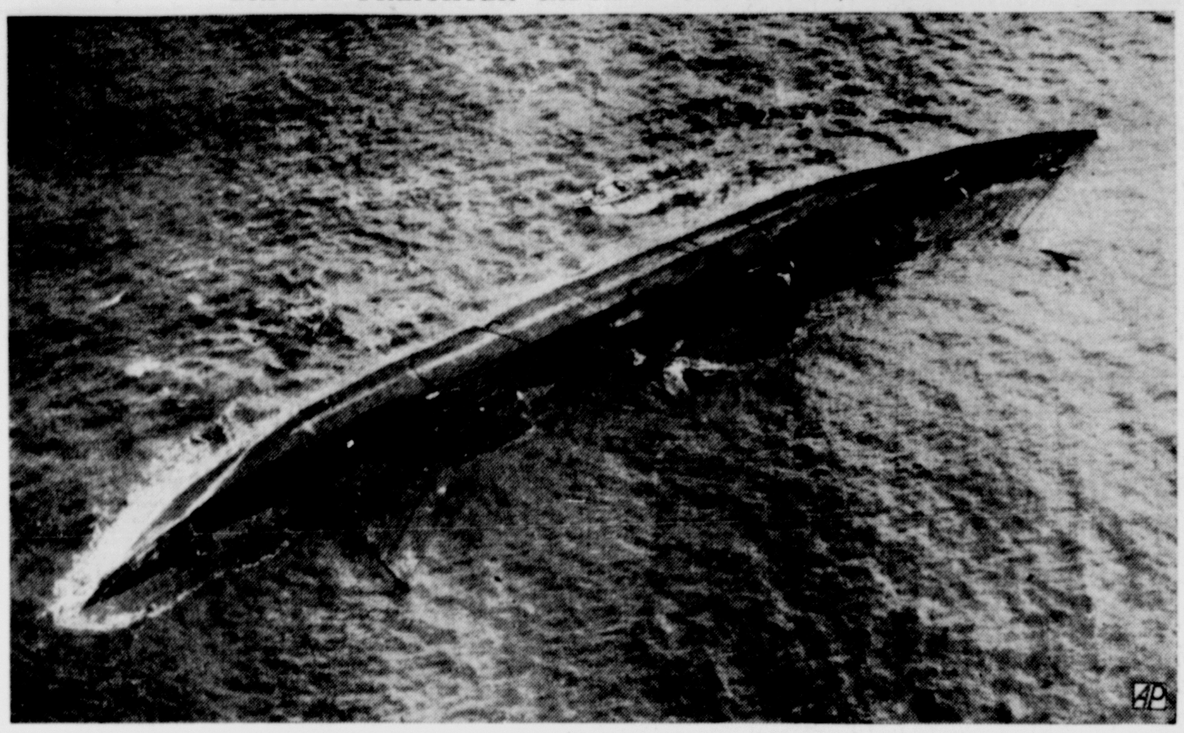
BRITISH FREIGHTER CAPSIZES OFF LEWES, DEL.



Loaded with what coast guard officers said was pig iron and bound from Philadelphia, the 5,791-ton British freighter Ramon de Larrinaga, is shown after it capsized three miles offshore in the Delaware breakwater near Lewes. Several of her crew of 48 fell into the icy waters, but only one was missing. Heavy seas, causing the cargo to shift, were blamed for the accident.

Willkie Urges Aid for Britain foreign policy of the administration because of my great desire for national unity.

LaGuardia Testifies

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York told the Senate foreign relations committee today that "complete plans" for joint defense of the United States and Canada were now in existence.

LaGuardia, chairman of a joint commission created to coordinate defense plans of United States and Canada, made the statement in response to an inquiry by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

The plans, he said, embraced tactics, questions of territory and coordination of forces and were based on the assumption that equipment and personnel would be available to carry them out.

Adding his indorsement of the British aid bill to that of President James B. Conant of Harvard University, LaGuardia declared that the measure was "part of the national defense program" of the United States.

The stocky, dynamic LaGuardia, testifying before the Senate foreign relations committee immediately after the silver-haired Conant had appeared, said the bill should be approved "from purely selfish American interests."

"I cannot afford to theorize about the date of an attack or the consequences of an attack or the probable effect of an attack," the mayor said. "It so happens that I am the chief executive of a town on the Atlantic coast."

He added that there had been "almost no opposition" to the defense legislation, which went through congress several months ago and "if you were for that, you should be for this."

Conant Appears

Conant asserted flatly that "the Axis powers must be defeated" and that "as a last resort to defend this way of life" he favored sending American troops to Europe. The issue in the European war, he said, is "the free way of life, opposed to a totalitarian way of life."

Most of the great crowd which filled the committee room and overflowed into the marble corridors of the Senate office building had gathered to hear Willkie, but attention to the testimony by Conant and LaGuardia was close.

Conant had spoken quietly and many of the energetic LaGuardia's statement were put slowly and with emphatic deliberation although now and again he banged his fist on the table before him with a hearty thump.

He said it was plain that Hitler and "his pal—his sidekick" Mussolini planned to expand outside Europe. United States shipping and South American trade would draw their attention immediately if England were defeated or there was a negotiated peace, he said.

"A negotiated peace won't work now," he declared, removing his spectacles and pointing them at the committee. "It represents a new philosophy today, one repulsive to our way of thinking, one that cannot be understood by anyone raised in the far west."

Example of Peace

As an example of a negotiated peace, LaGuardia said:

"A man is at work on his farm. His wife is in the kitchen. In comes a brute and violates the sanctity of the home and assaults the wife.

"The husband comes in from the field and finds the brute sitting at the table. The husband sits down and talks things over and decides to take him in as a boarder.

"That is what a negotiated peace means when Hitler is on the other end of the bargaining."

The New Yorker said he thought the United States might be made impregnable to attack from the Atlantic by 1942, but it would be 1945 or 1946 before simultaneous attack in both the Atlantic and Pacific could be resisted.

The nation's military forces could always retire to the midlands and set up impregnable defenses, he continued, but that would give "very little comfort to the cities west of the Rockies and east of the Alleghanies."

The United States cannot feel safe from attack, LaGuardia said.

"It isn't that we want to get into European affairs," he declared, "it is that Europe wants to get into American affairs."

"Please, gentlemen, don't be deluded into the idea that we are absolutely safe. We aren't now and that is why I don't want to take any chance. It is not in the cards that we will be left alone."

Senate Confirms Swope for Post

Appointee Undergoes Half Hour of Questioning

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11 (AP)—Reappointment of Herbert Bayard Swope of the State Racing Commission which he heads was unanimously confirmed by the state senate today.

The vote was taken after Swope underwent a half-hour of questioning by the Senate finance committee, which had delayed endorsement of his renomination by Governor Lehman for weeks.

Republican Senate Majority Leader Joe R. Hanley explained that the delay "had nothing to do with personal reasons" and was due only to the "usual committee procedure."

Democratic Minority Leader John J. Dunnigan paid brief tribute to Swope who, he said, "has rendered great service to New York state."

The Senate also confirmed unanimously Lehman's reappointment of John J. Phelan, New York city, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, and the nomination of Walter H. Edsen, Jamestown, to the Allegany State Park Commission. Edsen succeeds William J. Weller, of Ellicottville.

Swope emerged smiling from his session with the finance committee.

"They questioned me on the outline of the pari-mutuel betting situation," Swope told newspapermen. "The discussion was of a general nature and I agreed to submit my recommendations for changes in the law."

Swope's earlier proposal to a legislative committee investigating the new betting statute that "breakage" was reduced to the penny instead of the present nickel was not discussed, he said.

The finance committee also questioned Milo R. Maltbie, recently renamed by Lehman to the $15,000-a-year chairmanship of the Public Service Commission, but deferred action for a week.

The delay was agreed upon at the request of Republican Senator Walter Mahoney, Buffalo, who said Maltbie meanwhile would forward him answers to several questions on the Buffalo situation and his attitude toward investigation of the International Railway Company.

The investigation was requested several months ago by Buffalo's Mayor Thomas L. Holling and has not been acted upon by the Public Service Commission.

Gasoline Fumes Are Found to Be Good Anesthetic

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 11—Discovery that the fumes of pure gasoline are a good anesthetic was announced today at the University of North Carolina.

The gasoline used was the ordinary motor fuel, except that it contained no lead or other special treatments.

White rats were used in this experiment and they reacted amazingly. Under glass bell jars, instead of the ordinary form of mask, the animals went "under" in four to seven minutes.

They came out of the anesthetic in about the same length of time and showed not the slightest signs of nausea or other ill effects. Unpleasant reactions, particularly nausea, characterize some of the best anesthetics.

The animals were hungry immediately after their gasoline sleep. After some weeks of observation, no troubles have developed.

The experiments, said to be the first of their kind, were performed by Dr. Albert C. Cornsweet. Gasoline is one of a series of possible anesthetics he has investigated.

Dr. Cornsweet is a former Rhodes scholar, an all-American in football and former National A. A. U. and intercollegiate wrestling champion. He played football at Brown, with the "iron men" team.

False Alarm

A telephone alarm called out the fire department at 4 o'clock this morning, but it was to find that their services were not needed. Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy said that the telephone operator reported to the Central Fire Station that some one had taken a telephone from the hook and called "fire, fire" into it and then placed the receiver back on the hook. Tracing the call it was to find it came from the Central Lunch on Broadway, near the post office. The fire chief said that he was informed that a patron in the lunch room had been the one who had used the telephone.

Committee Continues

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—The House voted overwhelmingly today to give the Dies committee another 15 months in which to investigate un-American activities after dramatically striking from the record a speech by Rep. Dickstein (D., N. Y.) accusing the committee of favoring Fascist groups. Dickstein had told the House that 110 Fascist organizations have the "key to the back door" of the Dies committee.

Airliner Is Found

San Jose, Costa Rica, Feb. 11 (AP)—Hunters in the mountains of southern Costa Rica today found wreckage of a Costa Rican airliner which crashed in 1937 with the loss of five lives. Two Americans, Pilot Charles Stanton and Charles Gerchow, employes of the United Fruit Company, were among the dead.

Having Correct Manners Helps Fill a Date-Book

Well-Bred Girl Wins Attention

No wonder she's fun to take to a dance! She has the smooth, gracious manners that men like and she never creates awkward moments for them.

If a dance is tiresomely prolonged, she doesn't keep her partner going round and round. She knows it's the girl's place to suggest they stop dancing.

To his "Thank you for the dance" she smilingly replies "I enjoyed it too"—and then she tells her partner where she'd like to sit. And he will escort her to the spot, for no well-bred young man leaves his partner standing in the middle of the dance floor.

Knowing such little points of etiquette adds so much to your popularity. Asked to the movies? Never hang on your date's arm while he buys the tickets, but wait nearby in the lobby.

Or, if your beau asks where you'd prefer to dine, don't say "It doesn't matter." You appear uninterested. Say "The Tumble Inn" or "The Pink Frog," suiting your suggestion to your beau's purse.

Learn from our 32-page booklet the smart thing to do when dating, motoring, entertaining. Tells etiquette for dances, movies, games, the country club, introductions.

CUTTING THE CAKE AT BIG GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY SHOULD BE TIMED SO ALL GUESTS CAN HAVE PIECE

This is Important When the First-Comers May Not Remain Until All the Guests Have Arrived

Even though the wedding cake has not the same significance at an anniversary party that it has at the wedding reception, it does on occasion come into the celebration preparations quite definitely. For instance, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W— writes me: "At a big golden wedding reception for my parents, when should they cut their cake? As there will be at least a hundred guests, it isn't likely that the first comers will remain until the end. And yet, if mother and father are expected to receive everyone first and then cut their cake, as someone tells us, the first guests may not even see the cake cutting, much less get a piece."

The best plan—if it can be arranged—is to let as many of the guests as possible assemble—exactly as any audience gathers—before your mother and father make their appearance. Fifteen minutes or so after the hour set, or sooner if the room is well filled, the wedding march is sounded and an aisle is formed by two ushers who possibly stretch ribbons or perhaps merely ask people to "help make an aisle." The doors are then thrown open, and your parents enter.

Marching to the music, they go to wherever a background has been decorated for them to receive against. If they can do so easily, they stand; if they are not so young or not very strong, they may properly be seated. (The head and foot dining room armchairs are usually chosen for this purpose.) In any case, the guests then go in turn to where they are receiving and congratulate them. After a little while, if there are very many people and those who were at the head of the receiving line are beginning to leave, the wedding cake might be carried in to where they stand and held firmly before them, so that the "bride" can cut the first piece and divide it with the groom. After this, it would be put back on the dining table for the guests to help themselves.

Dinner is Announced

Dear Mrs. Post: How should a maid be instructed to announce that a meal is ready—on formal occasions and also when the family is alone?

Answer: Exactly the same at both times. She comes in, makes a slight bow and says, "Dinner is served, madam," or more likely "Mrs. Blank" in an informal house.

An Engagement Ring

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it necessary for an engagement ring to be a diamond or is an emerald surrounded by small diamonds just as traditional?

Answer: I have no idea how many more people have the diamond solitaire than other stones, but I do know that more of my friends have had other stones than have had a solitaire diamond.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad however to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Wedding Anniversaries". Sorosis Has Weekly Meeting

The meeting of Sorosis on Monday was held at the home of Mrs. Theron L. Culver on Washington avenue. The regular paper of the afternoon was presented by Mrs. Charles Ramsey on "The Free Theatre in Scandinavia and the British Isles." She emphasized the influence of Ibson and Bjorson of Norway and Strindberg of Sweden upon the drama of the times. There was evidenced a complete revolt against accepted patterns. In Ireland James Butler, Yeats and Lady Gregory contributed to the new Irish National Theatre. In England a long list of dramatists including Robertson, Grein, Pinero, Wilde, Shaw, Galsworthy and Barrie wrote the first plays that presented real people, an endeavor to describe "what is going on in people's hearts."

The next meeting of Sorosis will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Arthur J. Laidlaw. Members of Atharhacton Club will be invited guests.

Wes Ferrell Gets New Chance With Boston Nationals

Bob Quinn Agrees to Give Temperamental Pitcher Chance to Show Worth as MacFayden Did

By BILL KING

Boston, Feb. 11 (AP)—Provided that Pitchers' Fountain of Youth, discovered by Deacon Danny MacFayden when he came to the Boston Bees six years ago, hasn't dried up, Wes Ferrell, another exponent of the "nuthin ball," may be the next discard to confound American League managers.

Ferrell, evidently, is convinced that the invisible fountain still spouts at the beehive, for when he asked president Bob Quinn for an opportunity to prove that his ailing right arm had regained its cunning, he offered to sign a blank contract.

"Don't give me anything until the season ends and then pay me what you think I've been worth," the 33-year-old Wes propositioned Quinn.

Just what sold Quinn on the idea, he refuses to say. Perhaps it was Ferrell's unflagging self-confidence or, most likely, the memory of MacFayden's amazing comeback for the Bees. Then again, there are the records such aged flingers as Jim Turner and Lou Fette made while operating in Quinn's spacious ball park, rated as a paradise for pitchers who can make their heads work for their arms.

But regardless of all that, Quinn has agreed to give Ferrell another chance and insists on paying him an adequate monthly wage as long as he remains with the club.

Although Ferrell is one of the most tempermental pitchers of all time and MacFayden among the most docile, their long American League careers were very similar. Both were Red Sox stars and, when their times came, both were shunted out of the American League by the Yankees, MacFayden in 1934 and Ferrell five years later. MacFayden was considered a failure when he entered the National League with Cincinnati, almost as much so was Ferrell last year when he tried to break in with Brooklyn.

But as soon as he became a Bee, MacFayden regained all of his effectiveness, despite the loss of his speed. And that's what Ferrell hopes to do.

Shaw Asks That Name Be Omitted

'Buck' Hasn't Any Desire for Notre Dame Job

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 11 (AP)—Lawrence T. (Buck) Shaw of Santa Clara has counted himself out as a candidate for the post of Notre Dame athletic director and head football coach, one of the most sought after positions in the collegiate sports world.

Shaw has been mentioned prominently in connection with the vacancy ever since Elmer Layden resigned the dual post a week ago to become commissioner of professional football.

But the handsome, prematurely gray Santa Clara coach said last night that he had advised Notre Dame officials that he did not want to be considered for the job. He added that he had sent word to the Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, Notre Dame vice-president, before last night's meeting of the board of athletic control.

Father Cavanaugh, chairman, said the board would hold another meeting, probably Wednesday night, before making any recommendations to the Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, president.

'Y'-Jones Cagers to Meet Pine Plains Tonight at Y. M. C. A.

Local Five Seeks Mid-Hudson Win Over Strong Foes

Opponents Are Ready for League Clash With Combined Team; to Start at 9 P. M.

Action in the Mid-Hudson Valley Basketball League will continue tonight at the Y. M. C. A. when the "Y"-Jones combination plays Pine Plains starting at 9 o'clock. A prelim is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock.

The visitors dropped a close 31 to 29 game to Wassaic the last time out and judging from this contest the opponents of the Kingston squad tonight will be a tough bunch of cagers to play against. However, Kingston is favored to win and thereby continue its hope for a position in the playoffs.

Kingston scored a close victory over Pine Plains in the first meeting of these two clubs and ever since that battle the Pine Plains cagers have been the victims of close defeats. Most of their setbacks have been registered by two or three points on the wrong side of the scoring column.

Meanwhile, the local combination has been improving steadily and when Pine Plains invades the local court tonight the locals will be an organized club ready to defend any chance they have of continuing as one of the best teams in the Valley circuit.

Charley Bock Gone

Although the club will miss the services of its ace forward, Charlie Bock, who left the city yesterday for a year's military training at one of the army camps, Kingston still has a strong roster of players that would make any coach rather happy about the outcome.

One of the mainstays for the local quintet has been Art d'Allessandro, stellar guard, who has been working along from the start as a strong part of the club. Eddie Bock, Van Deusen, Johnny Gilday, Milt Dubin, Jess Shultis and "Beans" Baltz are the other cagers who have been responsible in a large way for the present standing of the club.

Pine Plains has a list including Knickerbocker and Raines at forwards, Hoystradt at center, Barton, Fister and Ballistoni at the guard slots. The club as a whole is pretty far down in the standings but the team has its strong points and it wouldn't surprise the local followers if they started to move tonight.

The starting lineups:

Pine Plains	"Y"-Jones
LF—Knickerbocker	E. Bock
RF—Raines	Shultis
C—Hoystradt	Gilday
LG—Barton	D'Allessandro
RG—Ballistoni	Baltz

Lutherans Set Pace With Lead of Five In Men's Dartball

Teams End League Games This Week; Six Are in Playoff Positions; Three Are Tied

With only one more week to play in the Men's Federation League the Trinity Lutheran dartballers have a firm hold on first place. Their lead over the three teams tied for second place is five full games. Clinton Avenue, Hurley and Congregationals are knotted with 24 wins and 15 defeats.

The Lutherans wind up the schedule this week against Port Ewen and the boys from the other side of the creek aren't expected to drop the leaders much more. The Clintons end the season against Trinity Methodist and this isn't expected to be too tough. Hurley meets Woodstock and the Congregationals end with Fair Street. Fair Street may have enough to hurt the chances of the Congregationals. The Fair Street team and Lake Katrine all have a chance to invade the playoff position.

Results of last week's games: First Baptist 2, Trinity Methodist 1; Lake Katrine 3, Port Ewen 0; Trinity Lutheran 2, Glenford 1; Hurley 2, Ulster Park 1; Woodstock 2, Presbyterians 1; Fair Street 3, Wurts Street Baptist 0; Clinton Avenue 2, Congregationals 1; St. James, idle.

Other games this week: Lake Katrine at St. James, Trinity Methodist at Clinton Avenue on Friday, Ulster Park at Glenford and Wurts Street Baptist at Presbyterians. The First Baptist team is scheduled to play at the Comforter hall.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Feb. 11—Frozen North Dept: When Helen Britt of Rochester, N. Y., went skiing up in the Laurentians the other day, she had to use a toboggan, an airplane and an automobile to get back . . . She tumbled and fractured a leg and three conveyances carried her to a Montreal hospital . . . Curious coincidences: If the Boston Bruins tie the National Hockey League record of 19 straight unbeaten games against Detroit, tonight, they'll be picking on the same team against which they started the string December 22 . . . and if they beat the record Thursday, it will be at the expense of the New York Rangers, who now hold it . . . When Happy Emms, the veteran player-coach of the Omaha hocky club who has performed in every league and most of the clubs, was carried out of the rink with a broken leg, he lived up to his name by cracking, "I guess this is the end of my hockey playing."

Sunny South Section: Photo in the Charlotte Observer shows Alice Marble, Don Budge and Co. digging into a big dinner before their exhibition there . . . Any way that proves, they must be drawing more than chicken feed . . . Bob Gantt, who starred for the Duke freshmen in three sports, will be allowed only two when he gets on the varsity next year and his friends say football will get the go-by . . . He's better at basketball and track . . . touring golf pros claim Frank Stiedle, a hotel clerk at Hot Springs, Ark., can drive farther than siege-gun Jimmy Thomson, which irks Jimmy not a little bit . . . Oklahoma City is all steamed up about getting the National Indoor Tennis and is planning a two-ring show in the municipal auditorium . . . When Mose Simms, coach at St. Mary's of Texas, found his basketball subs weren't doing so well in their classes, he made them take their books along and study on the bench during games.

Short Short

A Georgia manufacturer of baseball bats received a questionnaire asking what productive facilities he could offer for defense work . . . He filled it out, then note at the end: "We do not see that our products would be of particular use in strictly defense work." . . . They come in right handy if you have to visit a tough part of town on a dark night, pal.

Today's Guest Star

Lynn C. Doyle, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "Connie Mack has a lot of angles to consider. For instance, this is the fifth year he has been fooling around with pitcher Buck Ross . . . Mack played around five years with Bill Dietrich and finally made a pitcher out of him—but for another club."

Sports Cocktail: Jack Troy of Atlanta reports Bobby Jones shot two birdies near Albany, Ga., a while ago . . . They weighed 12 and 18 pounds—both gobblers—if Boston A. A. officials had read the inscription on the Hunter Mile Trophy, they would have had a hard time giving it to Les Mac Mitchell, who won the race . . . It reads: "Awarded to the athlete running the greatest number of times in three years." . . . Warren Wilson, Southern Conference heavyweight champion from Clemson, has three wealthy backers who plan to turn him into a world champ after he graduates . . . Georgia's Frank Sinkwich has changed his mind about preferring dates to football and his teammates voted to let him rejoin the squad.

King Attends Court

Harry Jeffra, the featherweight champ, has become a basketball fan with Loyola College of Baltimore as his adopted alma mammy . . . He's so enthusiastic that he lost his voice halfway through the Loyola-Western Maryland game last month and couldn't tell everybody about the victory.

Athletes to Dine At M.J.M. Tonight

Lentz and Messinger Will Talk to Assemblage

The annual Kingston High School Athletic Association banquet will be held this evening at the Myron J. Michael School starting at 6:30 o'clock. Ticket sales presage a large turnout at the event.

For the last month tickets have been sold to all who are interested in the progress of the athletics at the high school. In former years tickets were only available for high school athletes.

Two Army men will appear at tonight's function. Valentine "Dutch" Lentz, head coach of the West Point basketball team, and Edwin Messinger, former resident of this city and now officer in charge of the cage squad. Messinger was an outstanding athlete for the Army in football.

Both of these service representatives will talk following the banquet and moving pictures of college sports will be shown in connection with the addresses.

Two Giants Face New Ball Season Without Optimism

Mel Ott and Carl Hubbell Have Lost Much of Old Force; Ott Hopes for Good Year

New Orleans, Feb. 11 (AP)—Mel Ott and Carl Hubbell, the last of the McGrawmen, face the imminent baseball season without what you would call bubbling optimism.

"King Carl" admitted today that age might be creeping into his 38-year-old left arm, which has grown progressively weaker in the fray since it pitched the New York Giants to the pennant in 1937 and tamed the Yankees in the fourth game of the World Series.

Mel of the mighty bludgeon, who has hit more home runs against National League pitchers than any other man, said his eyes which annoyed him last season had given him no more trouble but would venture only enough of a prediction on the season to say, "we hope it will be better than last year."

Ott and Hubbell, roommates since Carl joined the Giants in 1928, are the only presently active players on the club who were regulars during the regime of the late fiery Manager John J. McGraw. Hubbell has been visiting Ott at the latter's suburban home prior to leaving tomorrow for training camp at Miami.

"I won't know how my arm is until I've tried it for a couple of months," said lanky, leather-faced Carl as they sat in the locker room of the Metairie Country Club after a last pre-season round of golf.

"It didn't hurt last year, but got tired after six or seven innings. I don't know if it was from the operation I had the year before or just because of old age."

Ott said he had not seen an oculist since last season and had not tried again to wear the glasses he tried unsuccessfully at the start of the campaign.

Nine Boats Ready

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP)—Nine sailboat skippers whistled for the wind today—eight of them hoping to beat William Labrot's Stormy Weather and Labrot out for a fifth successive triumph in the Miami to Nassau race. Winner of the event four successive times, the Annapolis (Md.) boat was co-favored with Robert W. Johnson's Good News, entry of the New York Yacht Club, to win the coveted Duke of Windsor trophy.

Knights Defeat St. Peter's, 28-25

Losers Fail to Convert 14 Foul Shots

St. Peters and Knights of Columbus were victorious Monday evening in the regular Catholic League basketball games. The Knights scored a 28-25 win over St. Josephs while St. Peters edged out St. Colmans 29-24.

Inability to convert foul shots was the difference of defeat and triumph for the St. Joseph's cagers. They missed 14 out of 19 tries. Meanwhile the Knights took advantage of this opportunity and proceeded to score a victory.

St. Peters went through a close shave in the tilt with St. Colmans of East Kingston and as the score indicates, the game was close all the way. The winners led at halftime by 14-12. Reinhardt was the big man with 11 markers for the winners. Turck paced the Knights to victory with 12.

The scores:

Knights (28)—Turck 12, Flanagan 4, Martin 4, Wolfersteig 6, Gardner 0, Murphy 0, Ausiano 2; St. Joseph's (25)—Gavis 8, Zaccheo 4, Egan 1, McDermott 2, Whitaker 0, Ashdown 4, Brooks 6.

St. Peter's (29)—Emmick 0, Reinhardt 11, Norton

St. Peter's Holy Name Has Movies at Meeting

St. Peter's Holy Name Society held its regular monthly meeting last evening at the school hall with an attendance of about 200. A lively business session was followed by an entertainment program of sound movies and refreshments.

The movies, shown by Claude Dolson, were supplied through the courtesy of the Liggett & Myers Co., and proved to be of unusual interest. The film pictured a comprehensive story in the manufacture of cigarettes and also showed the effort necessary to produce certain radio broadcasts. "Tobaccoland" revealed the hard work the raising of a tobacco crop entails, as shown in the story of the Ellis family, producers of the leaf in the south. The subsequent processes to produce the finished cigarette were also shown.

Tickets Now Available For Spencer's Dance

Delmar G. Kelly, principal of Spencer's Business School, has announced that all present students of the school and members of the alumni wishing to attend the pre-Lenten dance and party Wednesday evening, Lincoln's Birthday, at the Hotel Stuyvesant will be admitted free of charge.

The former plan was to sell tickets to those wishing to attend the event but due to an agreement with the hotel owner it was agreed to disband with the ticket plan. Tickets may be obtained at the school without any cost, Mr. Kelly said this morning.

Holy Name to Attend

On Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock members of St. Joseph's Holy Name Society will attend a requiem Mass which will be offered for the repose of the souls of deceased members of the society.

More Than 275 Men Attend Episcopal Dinner

Episcopal Dean Asks Churchmen To Stand Together

Very Rev. J. P. DeWolfe Addresses Convocation of Men at Dinner; Raps Dictators

The Very Rev. James P. DeWolfe, dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York city, called upon the churchmen of the world today to stand together in the support of their religion and to impress upon the chaotic world the power of God and His spirit.

Dean DeWolfe addressed a group of 275 men of the Episcopal Church of the Hudson Convocation and their friends at a dinner at the Governor Clinton Hotel Monday evening at which the Right Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, D. D., suffragan bishop of the diocese of New York, also was a speaker.

Dean DeWolfe, in a forceful and inspiring speech which was broadcast to radio listeners throughout the county stressed the necessity for a strong church to defend religion against the "stinging venom" of tyranny.

He said that the dictators, in trying to stamp out Christianity and the freedom of individuals which are God-given attributes, are battling against something that cannot be conquered.

In lashing the policies of the dictators in certain countries he said that socialogical surveys had shown that even the family and the home have been "annihilated" and that all standards of morals have been wiped out, giving way to great waves of social diseases and low standards of living.

Church Must Come First

Dean DeWolfe said that now as never before the men of the church must unite in their upholding of their faith. That in all times, unselfish sacrifices have been necessary to help the church hold its head above all other powers that would try to conquer her. The church must come first, he said, even to the sacrifice of personal pleasures. Only then, by a concerted avowal and recognition of the rights and endowments of the church can it prevail in these uncertain times.

The second point stressed by Dean DeWolfe was that in performing all his "miracles" Christ always had someone help Him. As illustrations he cited the raising of Lazarus and the turning of the water into wine at the wedding breakfast. "Today, even as then," the dean said, "Christ does not expect us to stand by and let Him do His work but He expects us all to help Him."

Peril of Opposition

Rapping the belief that the individual exists for the benefit of the state, Dean DeWolfe brought out his third point in the prediction that any nation that opposes the will of God will be "crushed beneath the slow, quiet, moving, purposeful dignity of the Christian church. Any civilization that has ever sought to overcome the purpose of God has crumbled," he said.

As co-workers with God and in practicing their religion which will take sacrifice, will come to those men "strength, stability and ruggedness to meet anything that might come against them."

Bishop Gilbert introduced Dean DeWolfe to the group of men which was made up of not only Episcopalians but other laymen from the county.

Bishop Gilbert also spoke on the critical task that is facing the church today and warned that the forces that are seeking to ruin the church are seeking to ruin mankind. "Mankind," he said, "is utterly dependent upon the things the church can provide." Man has tried human devices and "found them wanting." Now he must rediscover some of the spiritual sources which God has given to the church. "If democracy goes down before the forces that are now confronting us, it is because men like you and I have forsaken it," he said.

Col. Gerard L. McEntee of Saugerties acted as toastmaster. Group singing was led by the Rev. Clarence E. Brown with Bill Smith at the piano.

Holy Name to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of St. Mary's Holy Name Society will be held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the school hall. A surprise has been planned for the members and all are requested to attend this session.

The United States has 92 cities with 100,000 or more residents.

Ackerson, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, West Park, will officiate.

The servise is under the auspices of the Greek War Relief Association of Kingston. The choir of the Poughkeepsie Greek Church, consisting of some 20 young men and women under the direction of choir master Mr. Leontaras will sing the hymns. Members of the choir of the Church of the Holy Cross will take part in the musical portion of the service.

Representatives of the Greek faith from Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, Saugerties, Catskill, New Paltz, Highland and Kingston will attend the services.
